

James Emory

James has been a resident of Wild Horse Ranch for twenty years and was one of the first to develop an off the grid residence within the community. He has deep respect for the environment and works hard to live a sustainable lifestyle along with his wife and children. James is an established artist and sculptor in both New Mexico and Florida and his work can be seen locally throughout the town of Grants, Albuquerque, and Santa Fe, NM. Most recently, James has been involved in a revitalization project along historic Route 66, making significant contributions to the public art program known as Mainstreet Murals. Most importantly, James strongly believes the HOA should prioritize using landowner dues for community safety, road maintenance, and functional community wells.
